

QUATRO SLAMS TODAY'S STARS

SUZI QUATRO believes they don't make rock stars like they used to.

The 66-year-old – pictured today and in 1974 – tells Day & Night that today's singers don't put in the hard graft like their predecessors. "In my day you travelled from coast to coast for gigs. I don't think the musicians nowadays are the same kind as in the past," she muses.

"I was in an era where you learned your craft.

I pride myself on the fact that I learned my profession doing shows. That's how it should be."

Suzi is headlining the Legends Live Tour this autumn which includes David Essex, The Osmonds and Hot Chocolate. "I wouldn't have done it were I not the headliner," she's keen to point out. The eight-date tour kicks off in Glasgow on October 13. Tickets on sale at legendslive.org